

5 Ways Your Man Says 'I Love You' Without Actually Saying 'I Love You'

It makes women happy to be shown love. We like to hear the words, if at all possible: A good 'ole "I love you, you look amazing, you're my everything" works pretty well. Oh, and we like gifts and surprise dates too. But some men just aren't built that way — that's not how they roll. But does that mean he doesn't love you? Not at all! Here's the real deal about how men show their love, even if it's not with candlelight and roses:

#1. He does things for you. Yes indeed — he's a proud man who can take care of you and provide for his loved ones. He shows his love through whatever chores he does

#2. He loves your company and just being around you. He's the one who teases you, makes fun of you while you're cooking, or maybe even helps with a meal. He watches movies with you and lays in bed and talks with you about how work went today.

#3. In challenging times, he's sticks by you. Every relationship has ups and downs. This guy stays through the downs. He's made a commitment and he tries his best to get through whatever is going on. It might be tough, but you both work on the issues.

#4. He does things he doesn't really want to (just to please you). Not all men love to run kids around or do certain chores. Neither do you. However, there he is, doing them anyway. Why? Because he loves you, and somewhere deep down he knows that, in a relationship, there are things that need to be done to help it run smoothly.

#5. He supports your goals and thinks you're amazing. This is really the bottom line: He knows you're the best and relationships mean we can't have everything our way all the time. He picked you, and you're fantastic! He knows that.

A loving relationship is made up of many pieces and parts. What are some things your man does that show he loves you, but might not be romantic?
