

Community

–The key to this word is to split the word in two: common/unity

No matter what our differences are, our common/unity make us a community. We have spouses who put their life on the line for the safety of others.

The purpose of tonight is to come onto common ground in unity: we have been through a horrible experience together. It has caused an upheaval of feelings. Or in some cases no feelings what so ever.

We are a community of police spouse, with all our different needs and family dynamics. We will get through this!
