Collaboration=
The Key To Success
By Coach Chanise Gilliam

KEEP EXPANDING BY MENTOR COACH SHEZETTA

Collaboration seems to be the buzzword in successful project management. Many moving parts are being worked simultaneously during a project or when planning an event has been proven to be successful. This is only achieved through collaboration.

Project collaboration starts with a co-operative, cohesive project team. Without the co-operation and cohesion, the project manager is just managing a scattered group of skilled people on a project. Collaboration is not planning everything before presenting it to the team and saying this is what "WE" are going to do. That surely does not foster a co-operative and cohesive project team.

The several determiners of collaborative project success are:

- Unified vision and goal
- On time delivery
- On budget delivery
- Customer/Client satisfaction

ATigney Solutions knows from experience in order to successfully and effectively obtain these determiners we must collaborate. Collaboration is the strength of who we are. We have a host of Coaches, Consultants, Creatives, Marketplace and Ministry Leaders who glean from and support each other as they build and expand. Stay tuned for our upcoming Life Accelerator where we will showcase those in our network, www.ATigney.Solutions.

Have you ever found yourself coaching others further and faster than they have ever dreamed, only for you to discover that they are outpacing you? You are excited about their progress, but you lack any enthusiasm about the progression that's happening in your own world.

Our recent coaching forum sparked a huge amount of energy around this very thing. In our quest to succeed professionally, our personal goals become a victim. Internally, we are empty while externally we are pushing and promoting others.

Here's the thing, what we cannot do is expect to continue to have enough to pour out if we are not intentionally pouring in. You are one of the catalysts for your client's expansion. In order for you to authentically be able to continue to be a catalyst, you have to embrace expansion for yourself.

Explore all things that will keep you inspired. Don't be afraid to shift direction if necessary, so that you can find another niche or satisfy another passion. We are the billboard for "NO LIMITS!" I will add that there is "NO CEILING"

Gain the confidence and the perseverance that you instill in others. Otherwise, you will no longer be the model that they reach for. At some point, the people that you provoke will be the same people that pass you; not in ideas, but in passion.

Be sure to always remember to pour water on yourself first. Then the overflow will spill over onto the people that you serve.

So.....what's next? I recommend you connect with your coach and share your goals. Be open to accountability as you divide your overall goals into attainable milestones with timelines. As you actualize your goals there is a fulfillment that bring personal expansion. Are you ready to expand? if so, connect with your coach today at www.ATigney.Solutions.
